Mean curvature flow and the motion of hybrid zones

Nic Freeman (Sheffield)

Abstract Hybrid zones are thin interfaces between populations that are genetically distinct, but still able to interbreed. They are maintained by a fine balance between natural selection and movement across space. The talk will focus on modelling the motion of hybrid zones, as time passes, based on a connection between Brownian motion and curvature flow.